Two people spoke today in favor of the revision to Chapter 28. Many people spoke against it. Why is there no effort to mobilize support at these meetings?

The Senate did, however, then vote overwhelmingly not to kill the issue for this academic year. Perhaps something can yet be passed, but those favoring the (reasonable) outcome of three years' effort will have to be active and vocal. So far, the opponents are dominating the debate. I suggest that conversations be held with John Stewart, Tom Andrews and Rob Aronson beginning tomorrow.
